Two Dairy Championships Won By Welk At Solanco

John Welk, Strasburg R1, turned in an unusual double win in the dairy show at the Southern Lancaster Community Fair Wednesday when he exhibited a mother-daughter combination to the Grand and Reserve Championship spots in the Holstein competition.

The 12 year old son of Mr and Mrs Leroy Welk pulled off the dual triumph with a three year old cow, Colantha Dandy D. Stonehurst and her first offspring, a senior calf named Christine A. Stonehurst.

Wednesday's win marked the first time John had garnered a championship, though he showed his cow to a first place in her class at the 1960 4-H county roundup. She stood third in her class at the Solanco Fair last year

Six other children in the Welk family have exhibited Grand Championship and mals at one or more shows. One brother and one sister, in 4-H work at the present time, are still working toward the coveted rosette.

In the Guernsey classes Richard Ankrum, son of Mr and Mrs. Paul Ankrum, of Peach Bottom, exhibited a 3-year old cow to the top spot. Stella Jackson Nottingham R2 showed the Reserve Champion, a junior calf

R Edwin Harnish, Christiana R1, and his cousin Marilyn Harnish, Quarryville R2 split the top division in the Ayrshire show as they have for four years Grand Champion honors went this year to Edwin, son of Mr and

The win for the 17 year-old senior at Solanco high school keeps the crampionship in tre Linton's for the second consecutive year. Her brother Fred, won the rosette last year with a Hereford.

Milk is a consistently popular beverage with all Americans As a nation, we drink almost as much as we did fifteen years ago One reason for the slight decrease in consumption has to do with the post-war population movement from farm to city. Farm families always have consumed more milk than their city cousins Consumption among the non-farm population has held mostly steady during the last decade.

The cream in your coffee may not be as much or as heavy as it used to be But Americans fill this gap by using substantiol amounts of milk-cream mixtures, such as half and half

Delmarva-Georgia Competition Boosts Prices

During the 24 hour period ending 10 30 Friday morning, Delmarva reported broiler prices averaged approximately one cent higher as a reflection of keen competition between buyers for the relatively light available offerings

Prices paid and purchases reported during the period ranged from 14 30 to 15.50 for 754,600 head at farms.

A wait-and-see attitude developed among buyers in view of the increased asking prices Estimated slaughter by eastern shore processors for the week end was 752,000 head compared to the 783.000 head last week end

The Delmarva broiler-feed ratio for the week ending on September 15 was up one point from the previous week at 2 8. Broilers averaged 12 96 per pound and mash cost the grower $92 97 per ton The ratio for the comparable week a year ago was 3 6. The ratio six months ago was 3 9

Fair Season And Concomitant Confusion

A sign in our office proclaims to all who enter, "Anyone who remains calm in the midst of all this confusion simply does not understand the situation."

As we travel around the county these days, the words on the poster seem fitting somehow.

Everywhere we turn there is feverish activity. Mom is picking out the best looking jars of preserves and carefully putting them aside. Dad is giving the cows a few extra strokes with the curry comb and brush. Brother is scouring the cornfields and granaries for the best grain samples and Sister is taking special care of the dress and apron she just finished making as part of her club activity.

Anyone who can remain calm in the midst of all that activity simply does not understand that this is Fair Season.

Fair Season, the time of year for the young and the young in heart. A time for relaxing from the daily grind of usual chores by throwing the whole being into the feverish activity of unusual chores. A time to step back from the job of producing the food and fibre for the whole nation and look at the results—a time to compare with neighbors in fierce but friendly competition the results of the year's work—a time for farm young people to socialize with other farm young people—and a time for farm aldsters to talk about the good old days and think about harvest seasons of the past—all these and many more are the essence of Fair Season

Although not American in origin, the farm fair has become a part of Americana just as surely as has baseball or apple pie or corn on the cob.

Each year as Fair Season rolls around we can't help feeling proud of the fine schedule of local shows in the county. Even though several of the local exhibitions have folded their tents permantly in the past few years, we feel the ones remaining are of excellent quality and deserve the support of all rural residents in the county.

In answer to the persons who say a farm show can not exist without carnival attractions to draw the crowds, we would like to point out that there are three shows in the county without any midway at all. All three of these shows appear to be growing and getting better each year. This is not to say the fair boards are not sometimes hard put to finance the shows, but it is a good indication that a farm show can be just that without becoming a carnival, if there are dedicated members of the fair boards who wish to keep the shows wholesome, family affairs.

We believe Lancaster Countians should be proud of the fine farm shows in the county. We believe Lancaster County farmers should support these good shows with exhibits, committee time and attendance at the fairs. We believe farm families should encourage their younger members to participate in the farm shows. There are so many attractions to draw young people away from the interests of the farm and farming that we should take every opportunity to make rural living attractive to young people.

Participation in farm fairs and other community activities can be one of the strongest factors in the decision of young people to stay on the farm.

If there is confusion on the farms for the next few weeks, try to remember it is Fair Season and try to remain calm even though you do understand the situation. It will be worth your while

At least that's how it looks from where we stand.

We may have found the reason for the cigarette company's inquiry of the smokers, "Are you smoking more now but enjoying it less?"

The US Department of Agriculture this week warned growers against using rubber bands in priming or tieing burley tobacco Farmers were using the bands under tie leaves on hands of the aromatic weed

It seems that buyers of burley tobacco have complained of farmers failure to remove the rubber bands and the manufacturers must do a lot of hand picking and screening to separate the rubber from the tobacco. It is quite possible that the screening process misses once in a while.

We sometimes wondered about the smell of all that smoke in a crowded banquet hall. Maybe we have part of the answer.

Laymen Needed

Lesson for September 24, 1961

"LAYMAN" does not mean "clod" as some people think. A layman in anything—farming, medicine, law, the church—is simply a non-specialist A layman in law may take a great interest in law, indeed it may become his hobby; but if he never went to law school and never even tried to pass a bar examination, he's a layman So with the church. A Layman is a Christian without the specialized training that the minister (pastor, preacher or priest) has had. Most Protestants believe that a minister's training does not make a different kind of man out of him (except as all education changes any student). His studies, which the church requires of him before he can be called a minister in full standing, simply equip him for the special kinds of work he has to do The layman has not taken these studies, and does not preach, and is no pastor.

Dr. Foreman

"The truth of your life"

For all that, if ever there is a church where the laymen all become "dead wood," where all the work is left to the pastor, that church dies and doesn't take long at it either. Laymen are even more necessary to the church than ministers are. Laymen can be a church without a minister; but a minister without laymen can't possibly be a church

What is a good layman? There is nothing mysterious about it In the church, a good layman is simply a Christian who lives his religion—and has, to be sure, a faith he can live by The third letter of Saint John, in the New Testament, was written to a good layman named Gaius All we know about him is in this one-page letter John speaks first of all of the truth of Gaius' life. No doubt his ideas were good and his were true; but for John t not what he praised Ga It was the truth of his l impressed people most

"Any service to the brethr

Many people think of work as anything done in church walls, on church pr Now where Gaius lived, the no church building (th Testament was completed Christians began to build es) and no organization modern sense of that wor yet Gaius was a loyal "Any service" to other Ch (the "brethren") is called thing" to do Gaius's par specialty seems to have be pitality. County Future Farmers Plan Safe Corn Picker Campaign

"Operating a Corn Picker is no Job for a Careless Person," say the members of the Lancaster County Future Farmers of America ft requires skill and experience in being alert and careful A picker must be in good repair and adjusted correctly to operate efficiently.

The Future Farmers ask that you take just a moment of your time to heed the message of safety they are offering to assure you the "Good Havest Season"

The FFA Chapter members are participating in a nation wide program to prevent accidents to farm people resulting from careless operation of corn pickers

Efficient and smooth operating corn pickers are not as inclined to clog, a condition which may be the beginning of a serious accident if safety precautions are not heeded Read the instruction manual carefully Operate the picker according to the recommended speed for the power takeoff, gathering chains and snapping rolls Repair and adjust your equipment before beginning to pick corn Check to be sure all shields are securely in place Take it easy on the first few rounds to get the feel of picking corn again Keep the engine area clean of trash to avoid fire

Always stop the picker rolls before attempting to remove stalks that lodge in the snapping or husking rolls Never hurry When

Steer Feeders—

Recommendations For Feeding During The Conditioning Period

You can help your cattle adjust themselves to feed lot environment by observing some of the following recommendations which are based on years of experience of many good steer feeders.

1. Start your steers on an antibiotic fortified feed THE FIRST DAY they arrive on the lot.
   This feed should contain a higher protein content than grain, but less than a regular supplement, and approximately 250 mg of a broad spectrum antibiotic per pound (500 gms. per ton).
2. Feed no more than 2 pounds per head per day to beef calves. This will supply a daily antiobotic level of 500 mg. For yearling cattle and older, the initial 2 pounds should be increased by ½ pound per day until about 4 pounds per day is being fed. This supplies an antibiotic level of 1,000 mg per head per day.
3. Grain should be fed along with the antibiotic fortified feed in customary quantities gradually building up to full feed of grain. Feed half the recommended daily ration in the morning and half in the afternoon.
   CAUTION: Do not feed any other protein supplement during the conditioning period.
4. If cattle are not "bunk broke", spreading some of the feed on the ground or spreading some salt over the feed in the bunk may help in getting the animals started. Mixing the antibiotic-fortified feed with grain or roughage in the bunk is also a good practice.
5. If steers do not consume all the feed and grain, it is well to supply the feed first and wait for it to be consumed before roughage is fed.
6. After 5 to 8 days on the program, change to GREEN PASTURES STEER SUPPLEMENT No. 29 or No. 30 and feed according to recommendations of your Miller & Bushong service representative.
7. Bloat can be a problem. If a conditioning feed is used to control bloat feed it at low levels - - - about one-third pound per head per day.

For a successful and profitable steer feeding program, contact any Miller & Bushong Service Representative or call us direct at Lancaster, EXpress 2-2145.

Farm Animal Disease Conference Slated At New Bolton Center

Current research in the health and medical problems of animals will be demonstrated Tuesday, September 26, at the 1961 Demonstration Conference on Diseases of Farm Animals in Pennsylvania, sponsored by the University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine.

The Conference will be held at New Bolton Center, the School's rural clinical and research facility in Chester County, near Kennett Square, Pa.

This is the third such Demonstration Conference which the School of Veterinary Medicine has sponsored Some 300 guests are expected to attend, including representatives of Pennsylvania animal industry groups, members of the State Senate and House of Representatives, agricultural officials practicing veterinarians, and others interested in animal health

The research demonstrations will feature four scientific presentations. Following each presentation by a veterinarian, a physician on the University's School of Medicine faculty will speak briefly on related medical problems in humans

The four research demonstration topics are·

1 "Equine Surgery" Typical race horse injuries will be displayed, as will equine bones and joint sections illustrating injuries, diseases and surgical treatment.

2. "Radioisotopes in the Study of Metabolic Diseases of cattle." With the emphasis on ketosis. Diabetic humans also are subject to ketosis.

3. "Reproductive Wastage, Basic Research" with a discussion of work underway designed to explain why a certain proportion of a female animal's fertilized eggs die.

4. "Dwarfism in Cattle." Two cattle suffering from the disease known as dwarfism will be displayed by Dr. J. Ellis Croshaw, as he describes current studies in this problem. It is hoped, Dr. Croshaw says, that a test can be developed which will identify cows and bulls carrying the recessive genes which produce dwarf offspring. Dwarfism is similar to the human disease known as gargoylism.

A cover crop in the garden will add to the soil humus and help control weeds next year.

Sweet Peppers Can Be Frozen

Green peppers, long popular for stuffing and baking or for adding a dash of bright green to cottage cheese, salads, relishes and chicken a la king, have more to offer than attractive color and mild but distinctive flavor. They rate high for vitamin A and C, unusually high in vitamin C. So even small quantities of this vegetable can contribute to your daily vitamin C quota.

If you have green peppers in your garden that will soon be caught by frost or if you find these peppers a buy at local markets this month, you may want to put some down in your freezer. They are one of the easiest vegetables to freeze because they don't have to be heated in boiling water or steam before packing for the freezer.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture's home freezing directions explain that peppers frozen without heating are best for use in uncooked foods. Heated peppers are easier to pack closely, and good for use in cooking.

For freezing select firm, crisp, thick-walled peppers Wash and cut out stems, cut in half and remove seeds. If desired, cut into half inch strips or rings. Or you might even dice them—all ready to be used in dishes calling for chopped peppers.

You can simply pack the halves or slices of pepper into freezer containers, leave no headspace in the container and freeze immediately.

Or, if you plan to use the peppers in cooked dishes, heat halves in boiling water 3 minutes, slices 2 minutes. Cool promptly in cold water and drain. Pack in freezer containers leaving ½ inch headspace for expansion during freezing. Seal container and freeze at once.

These directions can be used also for freezing hot garden peppers.

Rats and mice migrate to buildings during the first cold period in the fall. Trash cleanup and baiting will lessen the problem all winter.

Hatchery Report Shows '61 Gains Over Last Year

Pennsylvania hatcheries produced 1 2 million chicks during August compared to 1 1 million in July and only 800 000 during the same month last year, the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service said this week in a special report

Chick output for egg type production for the January through August period was nearly 26 million compared with 23 million for the same period a year ago.

For the United States, egg type chick production during August was one fourth above a year earlier although seasonally lower than July

The broiler-type chick hatch in Pennsylvania totaled 4,161,000, slightly below the total for a year earlier and six per cent below the July total

Egg production for broiler type chicks in Pennsylvania during the January through August period was still five per cent above the comparable period in 1960

United States output of broiler type chicks during the first seven months stand at 1,533 million, or 11 per cent above a year ago The national broiler chick hatch during August was about 10 per cent above the total last year, the report said

Barley Grain Signup Begins

Farmers who want to take part in the 1962 feed grain program for winter barley may sign up at the office now, Landis G Becker, the Chairman of the Lancaster County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee announced today

He said that notices are now being sent to barley growers throughout the County, listing the individual farm's barley feed grain base, the established yield, and the 'minimum" and "additional" payment rates.

With this information, a grower may determine how participation in the program would affect his farming operations and income

The chairman explained that the program seeks to prevent a further buildup of unneeded feed grain stocks, by offering payments to participating farmers for diverting a portion of their farms barley base acreage from production into conservation A list of approved conservation uses will be available in the County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office and will be announced publicly in the near future

A farm's barley base will, in general, be the average acreage planted to barley on the farm in 1959 and 1960 To participate in the program, a grower must divert at least 20 per cent of the base as well as comply to other provisions of the program For this minimum diversion the payment will be 50 per cent of the farms normal yield, at the county support price

For an additional 20-percent diversion — up to 40 per cent of the base, the payment will be the county support price on 60 per cent of the normal yield

As under the 1961 feed grain program, advance payments will be made at the time growers sign up to take part in the program

Eligibility for price support on the farm's "normal" yield of the 1962 barley acreage will depend on participation in the 1962 barley feed grain program and on meeting at least the minimum requirements of the program These requirement include diverting at least 20 per cent of the farm barley base into conservation and not exceeding the farms base acreage for corn and grain sorghum

Ready-To-Eat Wheat

A new canned whole grain wheat food developed by the U S Department of Agriculture is being market tested under a name indicating that it is ready to serve

The new canned product is cooked whole grains of wheat with only the rough outer layer of bran removed It has a delicate whole-wheat flavor and practically the same nutritive value as whole kernels of wheat This new wheat product needs only a few minutes heating in a little water before serving It is a quick and easy alternate for rice and potatoes

The new wheat food is being tried out in seasoned form, pilaf, and unseasoned bulgar Bulgar, an ancient wheat food, for centuries a mainstay of Middle Eastern diets, is best known as used in pilaf, made by cooking bulgar in meat or chicken broth with various seasonings Pilaf is often served in restaurants that feature Middle Eastern dishes

Best Food Buys

Autumn Meal Planning Begins

The cool winds of autum are blowing across the Pensylvania countryside, heralding the approach of winter and forcing a seasonal change in our food supply situation, observes Tom Piper, Penn State Extension Marketing Agent A change in cooking routines may also be noted as the season for cook-outs and picnics comes to an end

Colorful apples are beginning to steal the spotlight at the fruit counter A big apple crop is shaping up, with all varities promising to be in big supply The Rambo, McIntosh and Jonathan varities are currently available; Red and Golden Delicious are being harvested in southern areas Peaches and nectarines are winding up, most available supplies are coming out of the storage supplies Blueberries plums and locally grown Bartlett pears are winding up too

Banana plantations have suffered some hurricane damage and retail prices are holding firm Prices are unchanged on Tokay grapes which are not large this year but possess good color Seedless grapes are moving at slightly higher prices than recent weeks Pineapples are scarce and high in price Honeydew melons remain on the list of good buys, watermelons and cantaloupes are cleaning up and prices are higher for best quality.

California still dominates the citrus supply picture Lemons and limes are plentiful and economically priced The Valencia orange crop has passed its harvest peak and is now full-ripe, grapefruit possess pretty good eating quality and prices are unchanged from levels of recent weeks

Potatoes, cabbage sweet corn, tomatoes, squash, onions, carrots, endive, escarole and most sweet potatoes are on the list of good vegetable buys Green beans, cucumbers, celery, lettuce and first of the season broccoli and Brussels sprouts wear higher price tag because of the current supply condition Recent hot weather severely damaged the Long Island cauliflower crop and western supplies are high in price

Forequarter cuts of beef, turkeys, fryers and stewing hens will appear as economical meat items in most stores Some foodmarkets will feature pork roasts, loins and fresh pork picnics at bargain prices Bacon will appear at sharply higher prices in most markets

The small and medium size eggs hold a decided price advantage at this season of the year and provide an economical source of protein.

New Booklet Describes
Penna.'s Agricultural Adjustment

"Agindustrial Adjustment in Pennsylvania" is the subject of a new booklet recently published by the Agricultural Experiment Station of the Pennsylvania State University

The 32 page publication printed as the Summer 1961 issue of "Science For The Farmer" points out some of the major adjustments agriculture will be called upon to make as farming areas become more urbanized and industrialized

After an invitation to read the booklet, written by Dr Lyman Jackson, Dean of the College of Agriculture, an over-all view leads into the specific areas of Land Use, Forest Industry, Livestock, Dairy, Poultry, and Horticulture

Dean Jackson, in the introduction says We ask you to join in looking inward outward backward and most importantly of all Forward to assess and develop the agindustrial program in Pennsylvania"

Copies of the booklet are available from the office of the County Agricultural Agent in the Post Office Bldg, Lancaster
